

McADOO STOPS THE SHAW PLAY

MANAGER IN COURT; WARRANTS FOR DALY AND REYNOLDS.

Former Acquiesces in Ending the Run of "Mrs. Warren's Profession"—Only Men Actors to Be Arrested—Buyers of Seats From Speculators Hadly Stuck.

"Mrs. Warren's Profession" is definitely off the boards in New York. Yesterday afternoon, just after Commissioner McAdoo had ordered it suppressed and had caused the arrest of Business Manager Gumpertz, Arnold Daly issued a notice saying that the play had been taken off the boards for good on account of "the adverse criticism of the press."

This came at the end of a lively day about the Garrick Theatre, Police Headquarters and the Society for the Suppression of Vice. There was no performance at the theatre last night, but to-night "Candida," with most of the original cast, will go on for a few weeks, pending further arrangements for the production of Shaw plays.

Monday night was an anxious one for the cast. Before the play most of the cast were half sick with anxiety. Miss Herne had been showing signs of breaking down ever since the unpleasantness in New Haven. Daly had a case of nerves. It is said that he looked through the peephole in the curtain at the gathering audience, saw from the character of the crowd that most of them had come expecting to see something salacious, and prophesied the finish then and there.

Even the audience could see in the first act that Miss Herne was nervous. As soon as the curtain fell she had a nervous collapse. The rest of the cast was assembled on the stage by Inspector Brooks and made to read over selected lines and explain their meaning. From the expression on the face of McAdoo's moral censor the cast read an early finish for the run.

Arnold Daly had said that he would make the future of the production dependent on the opinion of the public as shown by the dramatic critics of the newspapers. He sat up after the play and waited for the papers. The verdict was most unfavorable. The Standard was the only paper which had a good word to say. Even that Mr. Daly did not see until yesterday afternoon.

Miss Herne was carried out of the theatre. Yesterday morning she sent word that she was too ill to play. Had the play gone on last night the part of Miss Warren would have been played by an understudy.

Early in the morning Commissioner McAdoo, who had sat through the play and had sent Inspector Brooks to report on it, was called up on the telephone by Mr. Gumpertz. The manager wanted to know what the police were going to do about it. He added that Mr. Daly had read the papers and was satisfied from them that the public did not regard it as obscene.

"I cannot tell you what I will do," said Mr. McAdoo; "I have sent a report to the Mayor."

At the regular noon session of Mr. McAdoo with the reporters "Mrs. Warren's Profession" was the subject of discussion. Mr. McAdoo stalled, although he hinted that the police were going to do something. He was careful to point out that Mr. Daly had stated his intention of abiding by the opinion of the newspapers.

An hour or two later Mr. McAdoo called the reporters back and handed out copies of a letter which he had just sent in duplicate to Mr. Daly, Mr. Gumpertz, and Senator W. H. Reynolds, the "angel" of the house. The read:

"Sir: This is to notify you that after personal inspection and reports sent to me I have determined that it is my duty to prevent further performance of the play known as 'Mrs. Warren's Profession.' As a further performance will be a violation of the law, I will use the powers vested in me to prevent the same and to arrest those participating therein. Very respectfully,
"WILLIAM McADOO,
Commissioner of Police."

Copies of this letter were sent out by messengers, and Inspector Brooks designated a member of his staff to go before Magistrate Whitman to swear out warrants for the arrest of the actors, Mr. Gumpertz and Senator Reynolds.

In the meantime Mr. Daly was conferring with Moses Crossman, the house attorney, and with Senator Reynolds. He had denied himself to reporters all the morning, saying that he had made his last utterance on the subject. The sale of seats went merrily on. The Garrick is full at $1,250, yet the sale by noon was pretty nearly $10,000, and it was open for only two weeks ahead. There were only a few scattering seats for Friday and Saturday of this week, and those went fast. Ticket speculators had set the price of orchestra seats for to-night at $10 to $15.

In spite of rumors about police interference, they were there early in the morning, still buying. Any genuine purchaser approaching the box office in the early morning was almost sure to be held up by a speculator, who begged him to buy two or four gallery seats "just as a favor." The speculators looked happy, as indeed men might who had been turning $2 into $25 every time they made a sale. On that basis it was no longer speculation.

Mr. Gumpertz entered the office of the theatre at about 3 o'clock. A few minutes later Inspector Brooks appeared and was closeted with him for a few minutes. They left the theatre together. No one outside of the office knew that it was an arrest. However, the box office stopped selling at once, and notified all the outside offices to stop. A typical Shawite highbrow approached the box office just after the order went into effect and asked for two seats. He was informed of the state of affairs.

"And they call this free America," he said.

A few minutes later a stenographer came out and posted this notice:

"Further production of 'Mrs. Warren's Profession' will be discontinued owing to the universal condemnation of the press."
ARNOLD DALY.

"Theatre closed to-night—opens to-morrow night with 'Candida,' original cast." Every one was hunting for Mr. Daly, who was keeping out of sight. Winchell Smith, stage manager of the production, appeared and spoke for him.

"Let me say for Mr. Daly," said Mr. Smith, "that the action of the police had nothing to do with it as soon as he saw the criticisms. In fact, when he realized last night that most of the audience had come merely to witness a salacious play, he was hardly persuaded to go on with the first performance. I am giving this not so much as Mr. Daly's opinion as what I believe to be his opinion."

Mr. Gumpertz appeared before Magistrate Whitman, who held court after the regular time in order to dispose of the case. The charge was disorderly conduct, under the charge section of the law introduced after the agitation over "The Turtle" to cover such cases. The Magistrate asked after the rest of the cast.

"Miss Herne is ill," said Mr. Gumpertz.

"How about Mr. Daly?"

"He also is ill."

"Are they all ill?"

"Yes, your Honor."

The Magistrate looked at him hard, but let it go at that. Mr. Gumpertz was released on his own recognizance, promising to bring all the prisoners into court in the morning. It was said at the theatre late in the evening that the women members of the cast would be spared.

The troubles of the box office began after the evening papers came out with the news that it was all off with the play. About half of the seat holders exchanged for "Candida" tickets. The speculators rushed things pretty hard. One or two patrons who had bought advance seats from speculators kicked a little at getting only 2 back for a seat which had cost them from $10 to $15.

Fearing trouble when the 8 o'clock crush came, Capt. Dooley of the Tenderloin station rushed over the whole theatre squad and a few reserves. These kept order about the entrance of the Garrick, where Mr. Daly's announcement was lettered out on a big sign. The lobby, although jammed all the early evening, was as quiet and sombre as the grave. It was the funeral of Mrs. Warren.

Inside the old cast of "Candida," which had been hastily summoned, was rehearsing so as to get the show on to-night. Miss Herne, who will play the title role, was absent, but will be at the rehearsal this afternoon. Mr. Daly was still invisible. Finally, Mr. Smith sent out this benediction on the episode of "Mrs. Warren's Profession":

"When Mr. Daly said on Saturday night that he would abide by the decision of the press with regard to the merits of 'Mrs. Warren's Profession' he meant what he said. At that time the approaching production, through no fault of ours, had been surrounded by so much sensationalism we feared that the public would get an erroneous impression of the play and our purpose in presenting it. And the turn of affairs prove that this was true."

"On the opening night the theatre was besieged by a motley throng of curiosity seekers, who came expecting to see something that would appeal to their morbid tastes. This was exactly the portion of the public to whom we did not wish to appeal, and had it not been too late to withdraw we would not have produced the play then. When this morning we saw how unanimous the newspapers were in their condemnation of the drama, we then and there gave up all thoughts of continuing its presentation. Mr. Daly is a fine fellow, and he will not be affected by the notice which was posted at the entrance of the Garrick Theatre, in which he said that he would abide by the decision of the press jury."

"It was after Mr. Daly had written this that the notification that the engagement could not proceed came from Commissioner McAdoo. There is no financial or other consideration whatever which could have tempted Mr. Daly to give a second performance of the play after last night's experience at the doors, and after seeing the papers to-day."

SHAW PROUD OF HIS PLAY.

Police Not Protecting Public Morality in Suppressing "Mrs. Warren," He Says.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The correspondent of THE SUN to-day interviewed George Bernard Shaw in reference to the suppression by the New York police of his play "Mrs. Warren's Profession." Mr. Shaw said:

"If Police Commissioner McAdoo has earned by his public services the confidence of the American people as a man of higher character and deeper insight into social needs, moral problems and greater concern for the good of the community than I, it is not for me to question his qualifications or to invite Mr. Daly to resist his authority. I have a certain reputation in the world, which will not be affected by Mr. McAdoo's conviction that I am a blackguard. The New York police have a certain reputation in the world, and that also will not be altered by my conviction. I know my own business better than they do."

"In the opinion of the police prohibition is a permissible subject on the stage only when it is made agreeable. In my opinion the numerous plays in which it is made agreeable should be counterbalanced by plays in which its sordid cause is exposed."

"I am extremely proud of having written the play. It has made me more friends than any other work of mine, especially among serious women. It will make me friends of the same stamp in America, and these friends will keep steadily pressing the two questions: Are the facts exposed in 'Mrs. Warren's Profession' denied? If not, in whose interests are they suppressed? If I have been more and more clearly that the police, doubtless with the best intentions, are protecting not public morality but the interests of the most dangerous class, namely, the employers who pay women less than subsistence wages and overwork them mercilessly to grind profits for themselves out of the life of the nation. Naturally they raise the clamor of immorality and disgusting dialogue, but in the end the public conscience of America, at present a hasty, unintelligent and easily duped force, will get educated and go over them like a steam roller, with an effective factory code cast by the way."

"Mr. Daly offered to abide by the verdict of the New York press. If this is true he must have forgotten that the New York press does not go to the theatre. It only sends critics. Let the editors come and the verdict proposed by Mr. Daly will be possible, but if social and moral questions are left to the critics they will not improve on Mr. McAdoo, who probably knows the real world much better than they. I would prefer a jury of public spirited women with experience in rescue work and slum life to any other jury whatever. They know how society makes vice by refusing to pay virtue decently."

PRESIDENT SLIGHTLY HURT.

furnace and he did so. Then the crew decorated the boiler over that particular furnace with a placard intended to remain in the permanent reading "The President's boiler."

TALKS TO OFFICERS AND CREW.
The officers had hard work to restrain the crew from cutting up for so long a time. The President used, but a compromise was effected by which each man was given a shovel of coal with which to dig a hole in the boiler. The President was standing in the fire room. On Sunday all the men of the West Virginia crew were mustered aft and the President addressed them as follows:

"It is a privilege for any President to come on board a squadron of American warships such as these, not alone to see the ships, but to see the men who handle them. From the Admiral down through the entire ship's company every American sailor should be proud of what I have seen aboard this ship, the discipline, the ready subordination of each man, whether officer or enlisted man, to duty, the care taken of the men and in return the eager, intelligent, self-respecting zeal of each man in doing his work."

"What must impress especially any observer is how essential it is that every individual on a ship like this should do his whole duty and in any crisis more than his duty. The result as I see it in this ship is a triumph not only of organization and discipline, but of the ready zeal with which each individual performs his allotted task. At any time some emergency may arise in which the safety of the entire ship will depend upon the vigilance, intelligence and cool courage of some one man among you, perhaps an officer, perhaps an enlisted man. Any man in the whole ship's company who does his full duty can claim as his own the title of a hero. He has a right to feel a personal pride in all he does. You and your fellows in the navy and in its sister service, the army, occupy a position different from that of any other set of men in our country."

"Going through the ship yesterday, in the engine rooms, store rooms, turpentine, wherever, the thing that impressed me most was the all-importance of each man in his place; the all-importance of that man both knowing his work and feeling it a matter of keen personal pride to do it as well as it could possibly be done. All through the ship I have seen the same purpose, the purpose to learn exactly what the duty is, and then to do it; and the power to do presupposes the possession by each of you of intelligence, courage and physical endurance. I believe that this attitude of yours is typical of the attitude of the men of our navy generally and of the army also. Now on the whole I think we should make our country feel toward Uncle Sam's men in the army and in the navy a sense of obligation and gratitude such as they feel toward the other side of the world. I think you make you feel that no other Americans rest under so great an obligation to do their duty well, for in your hands lies the credit, the honor and the interest of the entire nation."

"You are doing your duty well and faithfully in peace."

"IF WAR SHOULD COME."
"Remember that if ever, which may happen, war comes, it will depend upon you and those like you whether the people of this country shall be kept even higher or to hang them in shame. I hope that no such crisis will ever occur, but I have entire faith that if it ever does occur, you will be equal to the demand that may be made upon you, and that by the way you train yourselves and are trained in time of peace, you will fit yourselves to do well in a war time."

"Let each of you officers remember in the event of war that while a surrender may sometimes be justifiable, yet that a surrender must always be expedient, while it is never necessary to explain the fact that you don't surrender, no matter what the conditions may be."

A tragedy occurred this morning—a man lost from the Colorado. Such cases are from time to time inevitable in a service like ours. Every such circumstance, everything must always be done, as in this instance everything was done, for the rescue of the man. But you men are fitted for fighting because you have the fighting edge. This means that you are willing at all times to face death in the performance of your duty. The man who is not willing to do this is not a soldier. He who has done his duty faithfully, and who died in the performance of that duty, therefore he died in the service of his country exactly as much as if he died in battle and deserves as much honor.

What I have said so far applies to the whole navy. Now, especially to the squadron and to this ship. No other nation can boast of a better squadron, a squadron composed of more formidable vessels of the matter of the officers and men we have no cause to shrink from comparison with any other nation. So far the Colorado has been the one ship that has had the chance to show what she could do in gunnery practice, and her record has been so astonishingly good that the other ships of the squadron will have to do their level best if they expect even to equal it. I need not tell you to remember that battles are decided by gunfire and that the only shots that count are the shots that hit."

As the President concluded his speech a petty officer sprang forward, and waving his cap above his head shouted, "Three cheers for Theodore Roosevelt, the ideal American," and the cheers were given without restraint. The President was highly pleased over this incident, and repeated his statement to the officers that this was a body of men of which every American should be proud.

BACK AT WASHINGTON.
The President stepped ashore from the Despatch boat Dolphin at the Navy Yard at 11:50 o'clock this morning, completing his Southern trip of thirteen days. He had been transferred to that vessel from the West Virginia near the mouth of the Potomac shortly after midnight. As the Dolphin approached the wharf a salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the yard, and this was acknowledged by seven guns from the Dolphin.

All officers on duty at the yard were on the wharf in full dress, and a company of marines stood at "present arms." The marine band played the "Star Spangled Banner" as the President walked alone down the gangplank, and Mr. Roosevelt uncovered and remained standing at the foot of the plank until the air was finished. The President's flag was lowered from the masthead and the crew manned the rail. Mrs. Roosevelt was waiting in the White House carriage, and the President, after exchanging a few words with the commandant of the Navy Yard, stepped into the vehicle and was driven directly to the White House. A second salute of twenty-one guns was fired as the President left the yard.

CABINET MEETING PUT OFF.

When the President and Mrs. Roosevelt reached the mansion Miss Alice Roosevelt came out on the north porch and kissed her father in sight of the spectators. The President stopped to shake hands with all the policemen, ushers and servants who were on the porch and then entered the house. In view of the hour of the President's arrival the regular Tuesday Cabinet meeting was omitted. The meetings of the Cabinet are regularly held at 11 o'clock. Mr. Roosevelt transacted no business before luncheon, and Secretary Loeb drove directly to his home from the navy yard.

The Dolphin, after leaving Wolf Trap, on the lower Potomac, shortly after midnight, was delayed by fog at daybreak, about midway between Wolf Trap and Indian Head, but the fog partly lifted after an hour's delay, and the Dolphin proceeded on her way to Washington. The sun was shining brightly when the President landed.

After luncheon the President went over to the executive offices, but he received no official callers except Secretary Hitchcock and Postmaster-General Cortelyou. He transacted some routine business which had accumulated during his absence, and he shook hands in the East Room with the Methodist Bishops who have been in session in Washington.

CUBAN BOMBS WERE HARMLESS.

Palma's Party Accused of Sending Them to Incriminate the Liberals.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

HAVANA, Oct. 31.—Gen. Collazo, a prominent member of the Liberal party, who went to Cienfuegos to investigate the details of the death of Congressman Villaverde, who was recently killed in that city, has published a pamphlet, in which he says that the dynamite plot of which the Liberals were accused was a farce, the bombs discovered by the police having been manufactured by the Moderates themselves. He asks what the country will say if President Palma, who has seated the investigators of the affair at his table, does not have them punished. Gen. Collazo adds that one of the bombs was an ancient affair, with a feather in the top. The others were bits of iron tubing.

A witness at the preliminary investigation into the matter, which is now going on, testified that a photograph of the bomb with the feather in the top was identical with the photograph of the bomb sent by President Palma to him in Cienfuegos during the war. These bombs were afterward placed in the Ayuntamiento museum. He overdoes the case, he says, and says that other witnesses declared there were only two bombs. However, it is believed by many that the bomb with the feather in the top was taken out of the museum for the purpose of incriminating Señor Villaverde.

Why Because?

THE KRANICH & BACH?

OUR UPRIGHTS have a construction differing from any other—which makes possible the use of the longest Strings without increasing the outer dimensions of the piano case. Greatest length of Strings naturally means GREATEST VOLUME OF TONE and GREATEST SUSTAINED POWER.

Most piano makers CLAIM these tone essentials, but we alone can PROVE by actual measurements.

There are other equally good reasons that should convince you WHY THE KRANICH & BACH; we can prove them when you call, and they are described in our new catalogue.

We sell for cash or on easy terms. Liberal allowance for your old piano in part payment. COMPARE VALUE before you buy—a piano should be a LIFE INVESTMENT and CAREFULLY SELECTED.

HELEN COULD THEIR GUEST.

Sits at Chairman's Right at a Dinner of Evangelical Workers.

Miss Helen Miller Gould was the guest of honor last night at a dinner given in the Hotel Savoy by the executive committee of the general committee which maintained evangelical services at various points in the city last summer. Previous to the dinner, at which 150 sat down, there was a reception, at which Miss Gould had a prominent place in the receiving line. At table Miss Gould had the seat at the right of the Rev. Dr. Wilbert W. White, who presided. Miss Gould is said to have been one of the most generous givers toward the work.

The Rev. Dr. James B. Ely, who acted as superintendent of the tent work presented a report which said among other things that it had been shown that summer religious work is possible in New York. Five tent meetings held and systematic house to house visitation carried on.

Silas McBee, editor of the Churchman, the Episcopal organ, described his audience with the Pope last summer.

"I was ushered into the throne room at the Vatican," said Mr. McBee, "and at once through the interpreter I explained to his Holiness that, only as one of another communion, had I come to pay my respects to him."

"Before the interpreter had finished His Holiness interrupted and replied: 'I do not care whether you are a member of this communion or not, I am glad to meet you as a Christian.'"

"It would have been impossible for his predecessor to say that, I think, or for any other occupant of St. Peter's chair of the past. It is eminently a sign of the religious times to me."
